

It is important to have alternative independent ISP's providing high-speed DSL service to allow the customer a choice of services provided at a range of lower prices. To agree to the Bell South proposal would set up large area monopolies with the attendant decline in quality of service, limited choice, and higher costs.